

Hello.

I was told by the law firm handling the sale of my property that you would not release the certification language for the survey unless you got [REDACTED]

The property is [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

I am enclosing a check for [REDACTED] because I need to sell, and I have no choice.

My question is - I paid you [REDACTED] almost 8 years ago to do a job - survey the property.

If I cannot sell my property without this "language" then you did not do your job 8 years ago that I paid you to do! Is this common practice? Honestly to me it seems like blackmail. I PAID you to do a job - which was not completed. NOW you want more money to finish the job?

I would really like to understand WHY you would do something like this!

Perhaps there are standards that you are not following, and I can inquire somewhere higher up to find out if this is legitimate.
